

MASTER 1

DEVELOPMENT ECONOMICS

INITIAL TRAINING

OBJECTIVES

The purpose of this Master program Development Economics is to train economists with very good knowledge about the theories and empirical methods of economics and expertise on the specific issues of economic development. The objective is to meet the growing demand for experts able to meet the challenges of economic development process, to evaluate the economic policies of developing countries and to integrate these policies in the issues of globalization and sustainable development.

The program combines the benefits of a thorough training in economics and an introduction to a concrete field of application, which also opens on understanding other disciplinary approaches on development.

Courses are both in French or in English.

It is also possible to follow a two-years program with all courses in English starting in Master 1. In that case, you will have to apply to the Paris Sorbonne Master in Economics (PSME). The PSME is a program custom-made for international students wishing to study Economics at the Sorbonne. The PSME program is a first year of Graduate Studies (Diplôme Universitaire) which offers Economics courses taught in English, together with intensive courses of the French language. It offers the possibility to get the Master 1 Development Economics by equivalence, allowing students to pursue their studies in Master 2 Development Economics or Economics of Sustainable Development.
